

An Inside Look at the Big Lots Behavioral Health Pavilion

The Big Lots Behavioral Health Pavilion is nine stories. 386,000 square feet. It uniquely integrates acute behavioral health services with intensive outpatient programs. The Pavilion prioritizes patient safety in a colorful, friendly environment for those dealing with severe behavioral health concerns.

It's transformational. It's innovative. It's stigma-breaking.

Patients have access to outdoor space. Each inpatient unit has a screened porch. The 3,000-square-foot gym and multifunctional rooftop play deck are great spaces for patients to run and play. Because we know physical activity is crucial for maintaining mental well-being.

Conference rooms allow for expanded education and training for the next generation of mental health providers and hosting community events.

A sanctuary provides a comforting and quiet space for families. Quiet reflection is shown to reduce stress and anxiety.

The Ronald McDonald Family Room is a respite for families with children receiving care. The room is a relaxed space for families to grab a snack or drink, take a shower, do a load of laundry or take a quick break just steps away from their child receiving inpatient care.

The roof is designed with conservation in mind, holding a water reserve of 1,195,237 gallons. This measure is good for the environment, holding the equivalent of 10,865 bathtubs of water for landscape irrigation.

Construction of the Big Lots Behavioral Health Pavilion required 22.5 million pounds of concrete - the equivalent of 540 fully loaded school buses.
